Dear Bronia,

Thank-you for telling us your story. It definately was worthwile, and I learned alot from you. It must be hard to tell your story, but it really touched me. It's important to study historical injustices, so we can understand what people have went through, and so we never repeat them.

5 things I learned from you: You had no way of telling time. I can't imagine not knowing about the outside world for even a week. You had to scrub the streets with toothbrushes. How can a person put down someone's dignity like that? It's so cruel. You shared one small room with your whole family. It must of been so hard, to be crammed together like that. Families were ripped apart and killed infront of each other. That must of been so terrifying. You only got a loaf of bread for food to last you a whole week.

Again, thank-you, Bronia, for taking the time to share your story.

Sincerely,
